<td>Lectures will be used to stimulate critical understanding of the systemic nature of skills and expertise and their importance and use in the workplace. Through these lectures students will develop an appreciation of the way in which institutional and contextual forces impact HRD policy (LO 1a, 1b, 2a, 2b, 2c, 2d, 2e). These will be supported by tutorials and student-led seminars which will include the discussion of case study materials and problem scenarios that require 'consultancy' type solutions (LO 1a, 1b, 2a, 2b, 2c, 2d, 2e). Tutorials will be used to reinforce the taught component and formative assessments will allow for monitoring progress. Students will develop an understanding of the way in which skill is conceptualised and understood (individual, job, social setting), and will appreciate how best to negotiate learning interventions within their chosen field and understand which factors need to be taken into consideration when planning such activity within a business. In addressing issues of sustainability, inequalities, diversity and social justice in contemporary societies and how they apply to HRD will be considered. This will focus principally upon inequalities in training</td>

opportunities and the impact upon the individual and society as a whole. Tutorials will be used to reinforce the taught component and formative assessments will allow for monitoring progress. These will be supplemented by web-based learning and self-directed learning to support each topic will take place within the directed study time. Formative feedback is provided in the tutorials and lectures.

Formal assessment for the module will take two forms. The first is a group presentation which will develop oral and team working skills (LO 3a,3b,3c). The second is a 1,500 word individual assignment which will be used to develop critical engagement with current debates (LO 2a,2b, 2c, 3d).
