Module Aims
This module explores the ways in which the key threshold concepts of representation, culture and identity are expressed through media. In considering these concept, notions of whether media practices reflect or construct narratives of the self and culture will be analysed through the production of a media project, combining a theoretical approach with a practice-based assessment.

Outline Syllabus

Learning Outcomes

Outcome Number	Description
01	Explain the ways in which the threshold concepts of representation, culture and identity are expressed through various media, and their relationship to discourses of power (LO3,6,12)
02	Critically evaluate the ways in which media represent discourses of power in relation to class, race and culture through practical application (LO3,6,12)
03	Develop, plan and produce an individual project and be managers of your own learning. Demonstrate effective oral communication skills, critical reading skills and the ability to synthesise information and take part in group discussions (LO1, 2,4,7,12)

Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy

Key material will be delivered via a series of online case studies which demonstrate, in practice, how representation, culture and identity are reflected and constructed in contemporary media practices. Tutor-led group online discussion follows the case studies, where you are encouraged to formulate your project ideas and share them with your peers. The assessment requires you to demonstrate your understanding and engagement with issues of representation and the media via the production of a practical project, and you will be closely supervised online by an individual tutor who will help you manage this process. The final project is contextualized within an academic discourse via an oral presentation.

Supplementary assessment is to repair deficiencies in original submission.

Mode of Assessment

Type	Method	Description	Length	Weighting
Summative	Coursework	Practical work - Media Project	N/A	40%
Summative	Presentation	Oral Presentation of project 20 minutes	19 mins	60%
