Module Aims
In this highly practical module, students will be introduced to fundamental media production skills for the creative industries such as basic camera operation, editing, game development and animation. With a high level overview of the key pieces of kit and software, students will produce a small media product such as a short film, animation or game as part of a group.

Outline Syllabus
Introduction to film and TV production technology; introduction to animation software; introduction to game development software; media production processes; studio productions

Learning Outcomes
Outcome Number	Description
01	Use appropriate equipment and software to design and develop a media product
02	Take on and deliver given tasks as part of a group working on a common media product
03	Reflect on personal contribution to project identifying areas of strength and weakness
04	Objectively consider a product highlighting its strong points and areas for improvement

Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy
Students will work together in small teams to identify possible media products. Working closely under a supervisor from academic staff students will work as a team to select the most appropriate product, design and build their media product to the highest quality. Each stage will require students to evaluate and critique their work and that of their colleagues. The module will be assessed on the quality of the media product produced (50%), a demonstration to staff and other student (20%) and a short written report on the process, reflecting on their personal contribution. Students will receive ongoing formative assessment of their product and their contribution by their supervisor on a weekly basis.

Mode of Assessment
Type	Method	Description	Weighting
Summative	Presentation	A demonstration of the media product to staff and peers (20Mins)	20%
Summative	Coursework	An agreed media product such as a short film, animation or game	50%
Summative	Coursework	A written evaluation of personal performance and product (0-2000 words)	30%
